

Stolen Oboes and Bassoons

This is our continuing list of known stolen oboes and bassoons. It is hoped that the listing of these instruments, along with particulars leading to their disappearance, might be of assistance in their eventual recovery and return to their original owners, as well as serving as a source for identifying suspected contraband instruments. If there is some way the Society can further discourage the theft of so vital a tool to the performing artist, further suggestions are encouraged from the readers.

Please add to (and hopefully, delete from) the list by writing to the oboe and bassoon editors. The list will be printed in all future issues of the publications. Please include as much information as you can pertinent to the instrument (distinguishing characteristics, special keyword, etc.) and to its theft (where, when, etc.).
